Sun lotion

protects albinos in Africa

Each donation brings a bottle of sun lotion closer to an albino in Africa

People with albinism in Africa are at risk of burning every day by the sharp sunlight as they have neither the products nor the knowledge to protect their vulnerable skins. For many years Stichting Afrikaanse Albinos has been working very hard to send sun lotion to Africa and to provide necessary information and education.

We use a simple though very effective approach. Together with a large group of volunteers, the foundation collects as much sun lotion as possible with a protection-factor of at least 30spf. This is the minimum factor necessary for protection against skin cancer.

Several times a year the bottles are shipped to Africa. The aim of Stichting Afrikaanse Albinos is to improve the quality of life for these people with albinism with sun protective materials (sunglasses, UV-protective clothing, caps, etc.) and sun protective lotion.

The range of our work

The foundation provides around 2000 african people with albinism with sun protective materials. We have projects in thirteen countries, for instance Kenia, Lesotho, Tanzania and Zambia. Via our local relations such as hospitals and associations helping people with albinism the products are distributed. The contact persons have the means, knowledge and, most important, the connections through which albinos can be reached.

The foundation also stimulates local production of sun lotion through a projects in Mali, Ivory coast and Togo.
